ADDRESS.

STATE OF NORTH-CAROLINA.

[District of Salisbury]

SEPTEMBER TERM, 1798.

To his Excellency, JOHN ADAMS, President of the United States.

SIR,

THE Grand Jury for the District of Salisbury, consider it a duty they owe their country at this eventful crisis to declare their entire approbation of the measures of your administration, particularly as they respect the present government of France.

On behalf of this district the Grand Jury feel full satisfaction on being able with truth to assure your excellency that there is not a man to be found resident therein whose sentiments they do not express when they without hesitation declare that under a continuance of your wise, firm and moderate administration they will be always ready to support the true interests of the United States, which they consider would be injured by purchasing either wealth, or ease, or personal safety, at the expence of dignity and honor; convinced that in free governments, loss of national character ought to de dreaded as an irreparable misfortune.

The Grand Jury with reverence desire that the Supreme Ruler may continue to inspire your counsels and increase all your personal earthly comforts.

ANSWER,

To the Grand Jury for the district of Salisbury in the State of North-Carolina.

GENTLEMEN,

I THANK you for an address equally respectful and affectionate, and for your generous approbation of my administration. I congratulate you on the entire unanimity of political sentiment and opinion, which prevail in your district, a felicity as precious as it is remarkable. Our fellow citizens, throughout the union, agree in general however very well with you, in thinking, that the most solid and important interests of the United States would be injured, by purchasing wealth, ease or personal safety, at the expense of their dignity and honor, and that the loss of national character ought to be dreaded as an irreparable misfortune.

The prayers of my fellow citizens to the Supreme Ruler in my behalf are always heard with the most lively sensibility, and can be answered only by mine for their best interests.

(Signed) JOHN ADAMS.

Quincy, November 10, 1798.

MR. FENNO,

The following ADDRESS was moved in the Legislature of Maryland on Saturday last, by Mr. Ephraim K. Wilson, member from Worcester, and seconded by Mr. P. B. Key, member from the city of Annapolis:

To JOHN ADAMS,

PRESIDENT of the UNITED STATES.

SIR,

THE General Assembly of the State of Maryland, composed of characters selected by the various classes of its citizens, and possessed of a full knowledge of the sentiments of their constituents, would, in this interesting crisis of public affairs, do little justice to their feelings, the interest of their country, and to your virtue, in forbearing to express an entire and cordial approbation of the firm, temperate and dignified measures of your administration.

Called to the Presidency of the general government, at a moment when the aspiring and venal rulers of France convulsed all Europe with a war prosecuted for plunder and aggrandisement it was not difficult to foresee, that every species of artifice and intrigue which talents could suggest, ambition excite, or avarice inflame, would be employed to disturb our happiness and peace to cajole or force our country into a war prejudicial to our interests, and to render your administration painful, perplexing, and, if possible, odious to the people.

The destruction of religion, and encouragement of loose principles, were eminently calculated to create fit instruments for promoting divisions in, and paralizing the energies of, other governments—hence the unremitting, dark and insidious exertions, practised to divide us at home, whilst a lawless, vexatious and predatory war, plundered us abroad.

To prevent the repetition of aggressions not more flagitious than destitute of colourable pretext, and to recal the government of France to an honorable fulfilment of its political engagements in the true spirit of sincere amity, we have seen, with pride and pleasure, your ample, just, and pacific instructions to our ministers to demand reparation in the accustomed forms of diplomatic negotiation; instead of the directory's meeting these amicable overtures, with pain and indignation we have beheld insults heaped on injuries—our ministers spurned with indignity—our country threatened with the fate of governments wantonly annihilated—and our citizens treated as vassals and slaves, who must basely purchase the privilege of stating their complaints. Conduct like this has torn the veil from the face of hypocrisy, and awakened the people of America from the delirium of unsuspecting friendship to rally round the government of their adoption. We have seen with satisfaction the annulment of a treaty, violated as often as the interest of individuals, or the caprice of a moment dictated; and we heartily approve of the protective measures of our government, as well as the late regulations for internal quiet. Preparation for war is preservation of peace.

Having emancipated ourselves from Britain, and secured our liberties by one revolution, we pledge ourselves not to sacrifice the blessings at the shrine of France, and we will stand prepared to encounter her open hostilities, or counteract her yet more dangerous principles and intrigues; nor will we suffer ourselves to be lulled into a fatal security by the semblance of conciliatory language or measures, the result of perhaps insidious policy. We will support the government of our choice, preserve our independence and our rights, or perish in the attempt. But we fondly trust, that so long as the enjoyment of rational liberty is secured, virtue and religion inculcated and practised, while the government continues true to the people, and the people to themselves, we may defy the assaults of any power on earth, and look forward, under the protection of Heaven, to a continuance of the prosperity and happiness of our country.

Adulation disgraces freemen, but the frank and undisguised expression of public sentiment is the most honorable reward an enlightened statesman can receive. Accept, then, Sir, our assurances in behalf of the people of Maryland that the wise and salutary principles of your administration inspire present confidence; and a retrospective view of your past long and faithful services, your steady patriotism and well tried integrity, constitutes an ample pledge for the future rectitude of your conduct; and with wishes for your health and happiness, we earnestly hope your usefulness will be long continued to your country.

The following was received too late for the whole of our impression of yesterday.

BALTIMORE, NOV. 20.

By the schooner America, capt. Vibert, from Cadiz, 43 days, the official account of the action between the British and French fleets in the mouth of the Nile, is received in manuscript, from on board the Ville de Paris, admiral Jervis.

Ville de Paris, off Cadiz, Sept. 27, 1798.

The commander in chief has inexpressible happiness in communicating to the officers seamen and marines of his majesty's ships before Cadiz, that an action was fought at the mouth of the Nile, on the first, second and third of August, and under the blessing of God and the intrepid conduct of the officers and crew of the squadron under the orders of rear-admiral sir Horatio Nelson, knight of the bath, a most signal and GLORIOUS VICTORY was obtained over that of France, as will be the best seen by the number of their ships taken and blown up, as follows:

MINUTE OF FACTS

Stated in the Dispatches to Lord St Vincent.

The French transports ran into the Nile, and Buonaparte landed with only a few days provisions on hand, with about thirty eight thousand men, two thousand having been cut to pieces on attempt to land at Alexandria, where they expected a passive reception. The last dispatches state, that the only supplies Buonaparte could get were a little rice and water, brought to him on camels by the Arabs, but that the Turks were taking measures, not only to cut off this succour, but to march against him.

The crew of the Timoleon, when the ship took fire, attempted to save themselves on shore, but were all cut to pieces. The L'Orient's people were in part destroyed in the same manner, and blown up, only a few escaped, perhaps into the woods to starve.

The French fleet, at the time of the action, had only five days provision on board.

[We further learn by Mr. Yates who came passenger in the America, and who was favored by Admiral Jervis himself with the official particulars above related, that none of the transports were destroyed, having probably run up the bay of Rosetta into shallow water, and that nothing certain had transpired to unravel the future projects of Buonaparte, whether he meant to settle down in Egypt, or whether he cast his wishful eyes on the distant shore of Mangalore. His situation at best appeared to be hopeless—his armed ships captured or destroyed, his transports blocked up, and his retreat cut off—his provisions nearly exhausted, and a supply precarious at least, if not unattainable; and above all, pressed on every side by hordes of Saracens, too barbarous to be worked upon even by French delusion.

The forebodings of the invader must forcibly assure him that the despoiler of Italy and the conqueror of Egypt will never be united in the same man, and that he has, fortunately for the world, perhaps, left the channel of Britain to perish on the banks of the Nile.]

We very confidently assured our readers, some weeks since, that Buonaparte's fleet had met with a defeat, and that the French government, by their "gag laws," had endeavoured to stop the circulation of the news; but that admiral Jervis, as soon as the winds of the Mediterranean would admit, would receive and transmit the official account to England, when the world would soon be informed of the grateful event.

It is distressing to a benevolent mind, to survey the struggles of parties, the proscriptions, the massacres, and assassinations, that have been guided by popular villains, ever issuing in their own, and their country's ruin, not an instance can be found, of one, who flattered and misled the people, but either he perished in the storm he had raised or ended in the fallacious glory of Cæsar. Indeed,

"'Tis in common proof,
That lowliness is young ambition's ladder,
Whereto the climber upwards turns his face:
But when he once attains the upmost round,
He then unto the ladder turns his back,
Looks into the clouds scorning the base degrees
By which he did ascend."

NEWYORK, November 22.

Rebellion subdued.

We are happy to hear from Dublin that tranquillity is again happily established. As danger and disaffection are wearing away, suspicion is becoming less vindictive and general, in her action; and although some few continue to be taken up, the charges must be well substantiated. The features of martial law are softening down fast; people may walk the streets after 9 o'clock in the evening, without being challenged by a Centinel, and the Castle has ceased to become a fortress. And so general is the restoration of a peaceable submission to order and the laws through every part of Ireland, that the Generals of the several districts have written to the commanders of the yeomanry corps, announcing the state of the country to be such, that there no longer existed occasion for their continuance on permanent duty.

Reputation is neither so difficult to be acquired, nor so easily lost, as has been imagined. Treason was not sufficient to work a forfeiture of it in Blount, nor peculation in Randolph:—even the character of Lyon has its defenders!

Tom Paine, has lately discovered that a Government formed of five Rulers is the best—because Nature has given five senses, and five fingers to each hand and five toes to each foot. If he had found his interest in supporting a Monarchy rather than a Republic, he would doubtless, have employed the same kind of reasoning in behalf of Kings, and we should then have heard that one head is the best for a State because Nature has given to one man but a solitary Nose.

An Irish Paper cautions its Readers against believing any report respecting Buonaparte. This may be a very proper and judicious caution, but what is the reasoning upon which it is grounded? "Where Reports are so contradictory," observes the Writer, "none of them can be true."

Buonaparte is said to be a great Astronomer and fond of Star-gazing; if so we wonder he has not yet been able to foretel his own destiny—Could he do so, we think he would scarcely have undertaken his present perilous Expedition.

The French Capital is very properly become the Emporium of Wild Beasts. It has for some years been remarkable for its number of Monsters.

Buonaparte has been called a great man, because by the aid of a great army and an exemption from every religious and moral restraint, and indued the want of every impulse of humanity, he has spread his army like a pestilence wherever he has been. We say with the old song,

"We trust there are within this Land,
"Five hundred as good as he,"

in military talents and knowledge, though they may want his opportunities and his vices.

The number of the members of Congress at Radstadt, including their suite, amounted to 589 persons in January last, and according to a calculation in August last, it was increased to 631. There are few parts of the world in which people will not multiply in the course of time.

An unfortunate American gentleman was the other day stripped at an E O Table, of near 460l. by a gang of Sharpers. He probably thinks E O the most swindling letters in the alphabet, not excepting even M. Y. and M. Z. [Eng. pap]

BALTIMORE, November 21.

The hand of God appears to have been almost miraculously engaged in the important and decisive victory obtained by the British over the French fleet, in Rosetta bay. Had the action been fought on the open ocean, its destruction would have been no miracle, even by an inferior force; but that 11 sail of the line and two frigates, should anchor in a close bay, along side of a fleet, carrying 162 guns and 2440 men more than themselves, and completely capture or destroy almost the whole, is a circumstance unparalleled in the naval history of the word. It is a victory which will waft the fame of the gallant commander to every corner of the earth, and rank the name of NELSON, (perhaps admiral lord Nile!) highest in the annals of British valor.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Buonaparte's expedition to Egypt, and Logan's trip to the Eden of civil liberty, are a pair of events which, it is presumed, will considerably occupy the attention and excite the admiration of future historians. In both of these mad enterprizes about equal sagacity is evinced; and the termination of each has served to expose to the ridicule of the world, the weakness and folly of the shallow politicians who fabricated them. Buonaparte is, before this, made food for the Egyptian crows; and citizen Logan, though his ugly form be not actually dished up, is fairly roasted with public scorn.

If it be true that Logan roves through the country, misleading the ignorant and exasperating the vicious to violence against the government, it may be properly said of him, as of his prototype, "He goeth to and fro, like a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour."

The Jacobins think no artifice too mean for the purposes of their faction. The following, in which is seen a mixture of their characteristic impudence and depravity, deserves the bittersest execration:—To render odious the law taxing houses, land, and slaves, several individuals in a neighbouring county of this state, feigning the characters of assessors under that law, impudently entered a number of houses, demanding in a tone of insolence and pride the dimensions of the fire-places, windows and doors; authoritatively assuring the ignorant and affrighted inhabitants that they should pay heavily for the luxuries of light and fire. This stratagem in more than one instance had the desired effect, of producing an active hostility to the law.

The United Irishmen in Philadelphia, who are to assemble this evening we are credibly informed, are composed of disaffected, illiterate Irish, Scotch, English, Dutch, and even—Americans!—Hence it would be no bull, to say citizen Logan is an United Irishman.

ENERGY is at all times, a beautiful as well as salutary trait in governments.—A well-nerved administration by crushing opposition in its infancy, diminishes its future labor, and even, perhaps, obviates its own destruction: for who when he beholds his house on fire would stand an idle spectator till the raging element had gained an ascendency, to subdue which his greatest efforts would be unavailing? It is not less impolitic, to suffer a daring and outrageous faction to breed in the bosom of a country.

Extract of a letter from Martinsburg and Berkley County, Virginia, dated November 1st, 1798

"Col. Pendleton of this place, and Mr Page of Winchester, offer for Congress in this district, both Federal. Mr. Powel of Louden county offers in opposition to Brent, he was the only Elector in this State who voted for John Adams, our worthy President. Mr. Machir offers again. General Parkerfield opposes David Holmes—the general is a true Federalist. I hope our State at the next Election will in some measure retrieve its credit.

To Capt. ROBERT WHARTON,

SIR,

WITH this you will receive a STANDARD, which you will be pleased to present with my compliments to your Troop. It is with much pleasure and pride I anticipate that a work of mine will accompany you in that path of honor and patriotism to which I doubt not you are destined. Accept my best wishes for the personal safety of yourself and your associates, and an honorable issue to the difficulties of our country.

EMILY HOPKINSON.

August 8th, 1798.

MADAM,

THE polite present of a Standard, formed by you, for the Volunteer Troop of Cavalry whom I have the honor to command, was received with the liviest sensations of gratitude and pleasure, and shall be in your name presented to them, when it shall please Providence to check the destroying Angel now visiting our afflicted city, and permit them to return once more to their homes.

Should the alternative of war compel us to take the field, and the Flag of Defiance be unfurled against our Gallic foes the Sons of Columbia will prove themselves worthy of enjoying the excellent Constitution under which they live, and the Standards presented by their fair Country Woman will wave in majestic splendour along the embattled ranks, and give by their presence a spur to the zeal of the Soldier.

Permit me to reciprocate the wish for the happiness of yourself and family, and a speedy check to the nefarious views of our enemies, only to be acquired by unanimity.

With due respect I am
Your humble servant,
ROBERT WHARTON.

MRS. EMILY HOPKINSON,

DESCRIPTION

Of the Standard painted by Mrs. HOPKINSON, and presented to Captain Wharton's troop.

The Standard is painted on a light blue silk, ornamented with silver fringe. The United States is represented by a fine, muscular, bald Eagle. The countenance of the Eagle, firm, animated and indignant; its attitude and the emblems that accompany it are indicative of the present situation and feelings of our country. The Eagle, with its wings fully expanded, is just rising towards sixteen silver star. In one talon he bears a golden shield, on which are inscribed the arms of the United States. From behind the shield there appears, borne in the same talon, an olive branch. The other talon is just grasping a sword, which, together with a trumpet lies in a group with a horseman's cap similar to that worn by the troop. The motto, SUB CLYPEO. PAX TOTA, flows in an easy label from the beak of the Eagle. It is endeavored on this Standard to represent an important political truth often recommended by our great guide. WASHINGTON, that "if we desire to avoid insult, we must be able to repel it—if we desire TO SECURE PEACE it must be known, that we are at all times READY FOR WAR."

Wednesday last sailed from this port the beautiful copper bottomed Brig Hassan Bashaw, pierced for eighteen six pounders, exclusive of the bow and stern chace guns. This vessels is for the Dey of Algiers, and is considered the most compleat Vessel ever built; the exact symetry of her proportion, the beautiful range of her battery, and the masterly turn of her bottom, created the admiration of all who saw her; it is to be regretted this master piece of naval architecture cannot be retained in the service of our country at this critical period. This vessel was Built by Messrs. Nathaniel Hutton and Samuel Humphreys, the draft drawn by the latter, before he attained his nineteenth year: from this fair specimen of his abilities in Naval Architecture, his country have great expectations.

The following mode is proposed, at least, as rational, to prevent the importation and generation of the Yellow Fever in the city of Philadelphia.

1st. With regard to the former, application should be made to the general government to prohibit by law any intercourse with the West India islands during the months of June, July and August, as long as the present war in Europe continues, provided nevertheless, that in case any person should import goods from the said islands during the term aforesaid he should be compelled to discharge his whole cargo and fumigate the same for 40 days in a proper Lazaretto to be erected for that purpose; that the vessel should also be cleansed and fumigated; that the crew and passengers on board of vessels importing goods as aforesaid from said islands should perform a quarantine of 40 days; that at the expiration thereof, and not sooner, the goods should be removed to the respective cities and towns to which they were destined in lighters, to be provided for that purpose;—and finally, that any master of a vessel, merchant, or other person comitting a breach of these regulations in whole or in part, so as to introduce the Yellow Fever, should suffer exemplary punishment.

2d. With regard to the latter, the legislature of this state should be applied to at their ensuing session to pass a law to enable the Canal Company to purchase Messrs. Robinson's Mills on the Wissahicken Creek, in order that the waters of the said Creek may be brought in the bed of the present Canal to wash and cleanse the streets of Philadelphia, and to supply it with fresh and wholesome water for culinary purposes and for extinguishing fire. That this may be effected with great facility, by raising the present dam or dams over the Wissahicken, a few feet higher, cannot be contested; and as the Canal is already dug out more than $\frac{3}{4}$ths of the distance at least, $\frac{1}{4}$ of the sum already expended on the Canal between the city and the falls would compleat it to the mills. It is therefore reasonable to conclude, that no mode more eligible or less expensive can be adopted. And indeed if the legislature should agree as has been the case with regard to another institution, to take shares in the Canal Company with a view of forwarding so useful and necessary an undertaking there can be no doubt but that the state would derive a large and permanent profit from a participation in such stock. Stockholders in Europe of all Canals calculated either for the purposes of commerce, or a supply of fresh water have never failed to make a most ample provision for their families by the proceeds of such institutions—and in London and other large cities, a cubic inch of fresh-water for family use, conducted by a pipe into a kitchen or a chamber hath ever produced the most incredible rent. The city notwithstanding its long boasted cleanliness, has perhaps become as dirty, and consequently unwholesome, as any in the Universe. A stranger in passing along Dock-street and many other places in the city where the mouths of the common sewers open, and like Pandora's Box of old, disgorge a compound of the most offensive smells upon him, would suppose he was in the bottom of the Temple of Cloacina—and should he unfortunately shape his course towards any of the narrow lanes or rather stairs which lead through the bank side of Front into Water-street, he would think himself seized by the ruthless fangs of the Yellow Fever.

To prevent then these noisome smells in future, the common sewers should be arched over, the temples in Front-street strictly inspected and regulated by law, the streets so regulated that all water should be discharged into the one river or the other on the surface alone, and finally, that the whole city should occasionally be covered over with pure water from a large bason, to be erected for the purpose at the intersection of Broad and Market streets, to be supplied by the said canal. Another very essential and important thing must be done to prevent the continuation of this unhappy malady. The Legislature should be petitioned to prohibit the sale at public auction of all bedding, bed clothes, wearing apparel, or any other thing which had been in contact with a person who had died or been sick of the Yellow Fever.

The foregoing plan, being the result of but a few minutes consideration, cannot be perfect; such, however, as it is, I submit to the inspection of my fellow-citizens, hoping that some abler hand will take up his pen, and produce a more finished work; indeed on a subject of such magnitude wherein the Health the Happiness, the Trade and the very existence of the city are involved, it would be highly criminal to remain silent. HUMANITAS.

Nov. 10. Spoke the brig Franklin, Hibbart, from Grenada to Kennebunk, out 10 days, who informed that two days before he had parted from about 20 sail of American vessels from St. Kitts bound for the continent, under convoy of a British sloop of war, several of them bound into the Delaware and Chesapeak.

17th. At meridian, spoke the ship Sally, Gelston, out 36 days from Honduras to Philadelphia, who sailed in company with the ships George, Charles, and Columbia.

Boston, November. 13.

This day arrived, the armed brig Orlando, capt. Henderson, from St. Petersburg, 53 days from Elsineur. Mr. WM. MACCARTNEY, from East Indies, via Copenhagen, who informs, that there is a Court of Admiralty, established at the Cape of Good Hope, in consequence of which, all neutral vessels are closely examined, particularly those from Batavia and Isle of France. All was peace and quietness at the Isle of France; it was reported that a severe skirmish had taken place, at the Cape, between the English and Blacks, the particulars of which was not known.——Capt. H. sailed from St. Petersburg, with nine armed American vessels, (being all in port) under commodore Thorndike, in the Sally, of Beverly; among them, Reliance, Webber, of Boston; Enterprize, Osmore, and Sukey of Salem. Left at Elsineur, John, Putnam, of Salem, bound up; capt. Mae, of do. and ship Orlando, of New-York Nov. 8, lat. 40, 51, long 97, spoke brig Lion, Jordan, of Portland, 25 days from Berbice, had lost all his hands except two. Nov. 9 lat. 42, 6, spoke brig Peggy and Polly, Drumming, of Bristol, Bound to Curracca.

Intrepidity.

Same day arrived, schooner Friendship, capt. Elisha Snow, from Jamaica, 78 days. On the 4th Sept. in lat. 22, 30, long. 84, capt. Snow, was boarded by the French privateer Revenge, belonging to Cape Francois, who took out all his hands except a black man, his steward, and put on board six men, ordering the vessel to proceed to the Havanna for trial. On the 10th Sept. capt. Snow and his steward rose upon the Frenchmen, and after killing one of them, and wounding three others, retook the command of the vessel, and ordered the survivors to hoist out the boat, and go where they pleased, giving them a supply of provisions and water. While pursuing his voyage home, capt. S. experienced frequent and heavy gales of wind, and lost almost all his spars and rigging; he was frequently in want of provisions, but was providentially supplied several times through the humanity of those he met with at sea; he particularly acknowledges the polite and friendly attention of capt. Jones Fawson, of his Majesty's sloop of war, the Earl Moria, and of capt. Edwards, of the brig Liberty, of Philadelphia.
